First, in such a case, the circuit must have been fully and finally reopened after the order was initially entered. See Miss. Code Ann. § 99-19-107(2)(a). Second, in such a case, the circuit court must have entered its order granting a new trial for an error appearing in the record reflecting the order's manifest necessity. See Miss. Code Ann. § 99-19-107(2)(b) (emphasis added). Indeed, such errors are examples of "manifest necessity" and therefore "error in the record." See Miss. Code Ann. § 99-19-107(2)(b). Accordingly, in cases of an order for a new trial that was not fully and finally entered at the time of the order's initial entry, a motion for a new trial under the counterpart to § 99-19-107(2)(b) must be made in the circuit court, but the motion for new trial will be considered by the appellate court. ¶12. As an initial matter, one must assess whether an order for a new trial for manifest necessity is properly considered a motion for a new trial under the 4 counterpart to § 99-19-107(2)(b). Under Miss. Code Ann. § 99-19-105(2)(b), "[a]n order granting a new trial shall have no effect and shall not be a judgment or a part thereof." For that reason, a motion for a new trial is not required to be made, but rather "shall be entered on the minutes of the court." Miss. Code Ann. 82157476af
